

THEY WILL DRINK.
An illicit distillery found in Failes (Ga.) jail.

An Atlanta Constitution
county jail is being run in Failes whisky for three prisoners.

Conclusion reporter was in the cells unearthing the nesting in one of a kind of state.

"Well, as have you caught up with me,
I will tell you. That is a part of our life."
"What is that?" he asked, as he pointed to a small oil-stove.

"Well, as have you caught up with me,
I will tell you. That is a part of our life."

"Yes, we made as much corn whisky here as we want, but I'll give you a right now that we don't sell any of it."

"Easy enough. You think that when we want to make a 'run' our whisky water over it. That makes no calculation or heat. This is the kind of water we use."

"Well, when we put this in the little tube which connects this large confessor tube goes under this large confessor tube and this is the steam tube which makes the water."

The boiling water, and then the steam out the pores.

"How much can you make a day?"

"I don't know. I expect if we work all the time we could make a pile, but we only half do so for our own use, and there is not half a dozen other prisoners in the jail who know how to make it."

"How do you keep them from telling nothing and drinking water?"

"Ain't you afraid the revenue man will get you?"

"No. I don't think any of them are enough to report us. We make it for ourselves, and no one in here has had a dog's chance."

"It is real good whisky."

"Just as good as any you ever tasted, and don't want to let everybody know what we are doing, but we get plenty to drink."

None of the prisoners dropped out.

"Not one. If they had we would have worried death by them. We will not sell or give it away."

"How long have you been running?"

"Four or five weeks."

"The jailor hasn't caught you with it?"

"No, when we know they are coming to shove everything under the bed and look as lame as lambs when they come."

"Do you get enough bread to eat?"

"Yes, you see they dish out three or pieces to each prisoner, and if you are the best you ask for it. There are about eight pieces a bread loaf when we get through eating."

"And it makes good liquor?"

"Just as good as you ever tasted. I had some made for you."
